On Saturday January 20th 2024, The Hopland Band of Pomo Indians Rancheria hosted a Youth Empowerment Summit with Kashia youth in attendance.

The event included breakout sessions, cultural workshops including basket weaving, motivational speaker presentations and a magician show. Attendees were able to participate in raffles and other activities throughout the workshop.

The event was a huge success and a great opportunity for tribal youth to interact and share cultural experiences together.

From January 12th—21st 2024, Environmental Planning Staff members attended a California Coastal Naturalist certification training. The training was held at the UC Davis Bodega Marine Lab and involved lectures from geologists, marine biologists, educators, conservationists and more! The training will be useful to staff in becoming more familiar with the unique terrain of the Northern California coast and in turn support environmental projects we carry out in the future.

Participants learned how to identify animal tracks and habitat signs, coastal geology, marine mammal conservation, phytoplankton, native& invasive plant species, and learned about kelp and tidepool creatures.

Abalone Aquaculture Update

Now that we have the Abalone Aquaculture research project underway at the UC Davis Bodega Marine Lab, here is the first round of updates for the project! Brian Wall has shared some updates on the beginning stages of this project, see below:

The abalone in the yellow trays are placed into a large tank with running seawater. From there, they are split into 2 groups.

Once all 465 abalone are acclimated and statistically randomized, all of them will follow this standard for different experimental feed trials!

Emergency Planning Department

Floods are the most common natural hazard in the United States, and recent fires make this storm season of particular risk for landslides and debris flows. Storms, floods and slides can cause property damage, loss of utilities, and loss of life, so plan now and be prepared to act. Review your emergency supply kit, make a plan for the whole family, help your neighbors get ready, and make sure you can stay informed and be alerted to hazards in your area.

If You are Under a Flood Warning, Find Safe Shelter Right Away

• Do not walk, swim, or drive through flood waters. Turn Around, Don't Drown!

• Stay off of bridges over fast-moving water.

• Determine how best to protect yourself based on the type of flooding.

- Evacuate if told to do so.
- Move to higher ground or a higher floor.
- Stay where you are.

During a Flood

• Depending on where you are, as well as the impact and the warning time of flooding, go to the safe location that you previously identified.

• Listen to EAS, NOAA Weather Radio, or local alerting systems for current emergency information and instructions.

• If your vehicle is trapped in rapidly moving water, then stay inside. If water is rising inside the vehicle, then seek refuge on the roof.

• If trapped in a building, then go to its highest level. Do not climb into a closed attic. You may become trapped by rising floodwater. Go on the roof only if necessary.

Preparing before Flood

Sign up for SoCo Alert

Know types of flood risk in your area.

- Make sure your Go Bag is ready in case you have to leave immediately, or if water and power services are turned
- Keep in mind each family member's specific needs, including medication. Don't forget the needs of pets.
- Obtain extra batteries and charging devices for phones and other critical equipment in case of power outages.

• Purchase or renew a flood insurance policy. It typically takes up to 30 days for a policy to go into effect and can protect the life you've built. Homeowner's policies do not cover flooding.

Human Resources Department

January is National Human Trafficking Prevention Month January 17th, 2024

IHS announces the observance of January as Human Trafficking Prevention Month. It is a month for all health care providers across Indian Health Service/Tribal/Urban facilities to connect across disciplines, with community partners, and with leaders to focus on prevention efforts and address human trafficking across Indian Country.

Human trafficking (a.k.a. trafficking in persons) is defined as the use of force, fraud, or coercion for a person to provide labor or services (labor trafficking), or to engage in commercial sex acts (sex trafficking). Human trafficking can include forceful participation in criminal activity and can affect individuals of any age, race, gender, sexual orientation, gender identity, religion, disability, citizen status, education level. or socioeconomic status. It can occur in one's community, without the individual being transported to another location, and traffickers (acting alone or as part of an organized criminal enterprise) can identify as any gender and may be a stranger, acquaintance, partner, or family member. Individuals affected by human trafficking often do not identify as being trafficked.

Due to the immediate and potentially long-term health effects from human trafficking, including physical, psychological, and negative chronic health outcomes, the IHS views human trafficking as a health care issue, and establishes policy for providers to practice to a trauma-informed, responsive workforce.

In 2021, the National Human Trafficking Hotline received 10,360 reports of human trafficking situations involving 16,710 individual victims. Of these reports, 160 were listed as American Indian/Alaska Native/Indigenous American. Many challenges such as lack of resources, fear of reporting to law enforcement, or engaging with the criminal justice system exist within Indian Country, and as it relates to the collection and reporting of data specific to the prevalence of human trafficking of AI/AN individuals.

Federal and tribal partners continue to work diligently at addressing human trafficking and support strengthening prevention efforts. Collaborating across disciplines and with community partners allow a comprehensive, culturallyresponsive, and trauma-informed approach with every individual at every encounter, enhancing the ability to develop a trusting relationship and meet the complex, unique needs of individuals affected by human trafficking and other forms of violence.
